Livingston HealthCare has announced Jan Baird as its new finance director.

Baird joined the staff after relocating from Petersburg, Ala. As finance director, she is responsible for managing LHC's budget and finances. She will oversee the business office, purchasing department, medical records, and accounts payable.

The variety of tasks and the many challenges are what drew her to health care finance, Baird said in a Wednesday press release.

"The challenge is to find a balance between meeting patients' needs and expectations, and the needs and resources of the organization," she said. "Finding that balance is always a challenge, and succeeding at it is very rewarding."

Baird said she feels Livingston was the right place at the right time for her and her husband.

"The position was available and the community was a perfect fit," she said. "It really has the best combination of an accessible location, lots of recreation and the friendliness of a small town."
