

Monday, November 1, 2009 Livingston, Montana Vol. 96 No. 44 15

Before polio vaccines

Enterprise photo by Angela Schneider

Ben Vandervegt, left, and Daryl Hansen, of the Livingston Rotary Club, put Jo Tecca, of Livingston, into an iron lung at the Livingston Health Care's Fall Health Festival, Saturday. The festival, which attracted about 1,000 visitors, featured health-related vendors and offered seasonal and H1N1 flu vaccinations. The iron lung was developed in the late 1920s, before polio vaccines, to help polio sufferers breathe during the early stages of their recovery.