Teaching Responsibilities

I co-teach (and have for the past 33 years) an undergraduate course with Dr. Robert Thompson entitled the Biopsychosocial Aspects of Human Development each fall semester.

I give periodic talks to residents and geriatric psychiatry fellows.

I also engage in ad hoc continuing medical educational activities documented under invited talks above.

Areas of Research Interest

Psychiatric epidemiology, primarily secondary analysis at present of national data bases in collaboration with a number of colleagues both locally and nationally.

In the past I have lead a number of large community based epidemiologic studies, including the Epidemiologic Catchment Area Study at Duke, the Established Populations for Epidemiologic Study of the Elderly at Duke, and the MacArthur Field Trials of Successful Aging.

Areas of focus include late life depression, substance use disorders, chronic illnesses, religion and psychiatry, and mortality studies.
